"DOUBTLESS THE

Best Cough Medicine

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and Very best Houses in America.]

Messrs. Cutler Bros. & Co.

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 13, 1872

Please send us Ten gross small and Three gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World (Signed) ALLEN & CO.

P. S.—These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 7 Worcester Sq., Boston, March 14 1873

Messrs. Cutler Bros. & Co.

In ordering a another lot of your invaluable Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam I would like to tell you what I know of it, that others may have the benefit of it.

EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice ... I have kept it constantly in the house ...

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case ... and I will state one in regard to my mother where

LIFE WAS SAVED

... a case of ... of the lungs ... skillful physician ... so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying. I assure you and recovery rapid. She is now over 80 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops according to the violence of the cough, which always yields in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

IRRITATION

is at once subdued and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case—that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

and coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and I got

ENTIRELY WELL,

... which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM. Very truly yours, JOHN CATEN.

As there are many imitations be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1.00, small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

TITCOMB'S

Excelsior Liniment

FOR

MAN AND BEAST.

The remarkable cures it has effected places it as one of the most important and valuable remedies ever discovered for the cure and relief of pain in any form with which suffering humanity is afflicted. It cures Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Bruises and Wounds of every nature ... Physicians prescribe it ...

We append a few of the many testimonials ... this medicine has been received by the public.

TESTIMONIALS

H. J. Titcomb Esq.

Dear Sir—As you are aware during the recent severe cold weather, I have been professionally visiting Maine, during which time I took a violent cold which settled in my back and limbs in the form of Rheumatism. Two applications of your invaluable liniment to the afflicted parts (tried in before the fire just before retiring) gave instant relief and restored me to my usual health. In my extensive practice I have used various kinds of Liniment, but none equal to yours.

MAINE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

[From the Brunswick Telegraph.]

We stated in our report of the proceedings of the meeting held in Portland, last month, that a paper was prepared by Hon. John E. Godfrey of Bangor, but which, for want of time, was not then read. As the paper will ... up for reading at the next meeting, it is itself ... improper to make more than a brief synopsis of its contents. Judge Godfrey has thoroughly investigated his authorities, and thus he presents probably as full a sketch of the life and character of his subject, Jean Vincent Baron de St. Castin, as it is possible to draw at the present time. We give only the more salient points ... the biography and services of Castin in connection with Maine history ...

All traces of the family of Castin were lost in the time of the French Revolution, and this much only is known, that it was one of position in the town of Oloron, district of Bearn, in the Lower Pyrenees, France. The subject of this memoir was born about 1636. At the age of ... he left his home and with other nobles joined the famous Regiment of Carignan furnished by Louis XIV to aid the Emperor of Germany in his contest with the Turks. In one engagement the Turks had greatly gained the advantage over the Germans when the French moved. It is said that the Turkish commander, on seeing the young noblemen pour forth with their uniforms laced with ribbons and their blond perukes, asked—"Who are those maidens?" And yet these maidens broke the terrible Turkish lines. The first shock of the ... battle was turned, the Turks defeated and this battle closed the war.

The following year the Carignan Regiment came out to Canada, to aid in quelling Indian rebellions. Subsequently, after peace had been concluded with the Indians in 1666–67, the Regiment was disbanded, the soldiers induced to settle in the country, the officers being mostly of noble families, were offered large tracts of territory called seigneuries, which they generally accepted. ... nobles also received grants ... of hunting and fishing, they soon fell ... and became ... impoverished ... The ... families ... with their ... daughters working in the fields.

This ... nothing on but ... the characteristic ... Castin ... at the present day ...

Parkman classes Castin with these gentilshommes, but Judge Godfrey thinks that he was too enterprising and possessed of too romantic a nature to fix himself in a desolate seigniory in an unpromising country, and thus wander this ... in ... Acadia or Maine. His first ... of his coming probably will never be revealed, though it is ... to suppose that it was an attachment for Matocawando ... formed during some of the many visits of this Indian chieftain to Quebec. The tribe of Madockawando was a clan of the Abenakis, commonly called Tarratines, a name given to the Eastern Indians by the English colonists. ... Englishmen ... speak in high praise. Their ability, courage and humanity probably made a deep impression upon Castin and thus, induced to visit ... he ... among them. He married a daughter of Madockawando, probably soon after he came to Penobscot, and fully identified himself with the savages ... adopting their ... conduct. ... He came to Penobscot about 1667 and was ... ensign in the Regiment in which he had served.

Judge Godfrey then goes on to speak of the fort at Pentagoet, the taking and retaking of it from the year 1670 to 1676, about which time Castin came into possession of it, carrying on a traffic with the savages and with the English by which he accumulated a fortune of three hundred thousand crowns. He was subject to many interruptions and annoyances from his own countrymen and the English would have been glad of his opportunities for trade with the savages. He appears to have desired to be on good terms with all his neighbors, especially with the English with whom a contraband trade was very profitable. He also had a trading house at Port Royal, and his business was not seriously interfered with until 1684 and then through the jealousy and rivalry of the English, who claimed possession of the country from the Kennebec to St. Croix and through the rascality ... of one Perrot, a former Governor of Montreal.

The Judge goes on to describe the old country, double dealing, etc., to which Castin was subjected, and how wonderfully he bore himself through all of his trials, and how justly indignant he was that his establishment at Pentagoet was plundered by Gov. Andros in 1688.

The writer goes on to describe the series of conflicts going on between the English and French on this coast, and defends St. Castin from many of the charges preferred against him. He left America probably about 1701 and died a few years (date not known) afterwards.

Judge Godfrey says—"While it is undisputed that St. Castin for many years lived disreputably amongst the Indians, yet there is reason to believe, that after the year 1687, he changed his habits and lived, as far as respectably as his sovereign did under Madame de Maintenon. That he was early lawfully married to a daughter of Madockawando is probable from the fact that his son had the priest's certificate of his legitimacy. By a statement of De Meneval, dated Dec. 1, 1687, it would then appear that he then had no wife, as he promised to quit the life he had led up to that time; as by another statement of the same office, dated Sept. 10, 1688, he was then married. In 1693 he was living at Pentagoet with his wife and child. The idea prevailed in New England that he had several wives at one time, but the fact that he was a Roman Catholic precluded that belief, unless he adjured his religion and justified himself under some "Latter-Day" savage regulation. Of this there is no evidence. By the English he was suspected as a 'false friend.'"

"The people of New England were wrong in suspecting St. Castin of a disposition to injure them. His object in the country was money. He was a shrewd business man, and was successful in his contraband trade with his English neighbors. His interests were on the side of peace, and he must have deprecated a war or anything that would have interrupted his business intercourse with them."

Judge Godfrey presents a full and carefully prepared memoir of St. Castin, giving his authorities, and he has incorporated in his paper facts new to us, and which the writer claims, we believe have never been presented before.

"Pen agoet"—as Dr. G. A. Wheeler in his "History of Castine" just published says: "Situated upon the eastern side of Penobscot Bay and river may be said to have embraced the territory now comprised in the three towns of Penobscot, Brooksville and Castine." The name of Castine was derived from that of the Baron St. Castin. And by the by, the volume of Dr. Wheeler loaned to us by Dr. Woods appears to embody a great deal of curious and valuable information—a most interesting feature of the work being a "copy of an ancient and authentic chart" of the territory described.

DEMOCRATIC FIRST-FRUITS.

[From Harper's Weekly.]

The first national result of the Democratic reaction of last year was the election of Mr. Eaton, of Connecticut, to the Senate of the United States. He was the representative of the real sentiment and tendency of his party, and in a speech made soon after his election he foreshadowed the course in regard to the amendments which Mr George Tickenor Curtis elaborated in his letter to the Manhattan Club after the New York election. Mr. Eaton has now made a speech in the Senate. It is a grave misfortune for a mere politician, of whatever local reputation, to be transferred to that arena. If he speaks, the whole country hears, and, despite the expressive silence or the jealous praise of his party organs, he is measured by the public judgment as surely as a new boy at school by his comrades. Mr. Eaton's speech shows conclusively that he is a bitter, narrow, unintelligent partisan, and nothing more. He was a "Copperhead" during the war, and in his all the spirit and tone of his class. Wholly unimportant in himself, he is nevertheless the representative of a party that aims to control the Government. He is the chosen leader of those who are now speaking to the people of Connecticut to restore the Democratic party to power, and his views must be accepted as those of his associates and followers.

The substance of his speech was a declaration reiterated and repeated, that the States of the Union are sovereign. It is a rather useless discussion, since a war of four years has decided that they are not so. Mr. Eaton said his assertion that the States were "sovereign and independent" was not heresy when Madison lived. He is mistaken. Mr. Madison said, in the Convention of 1787, "The States never possessed the essential rights of sovereignty, though they were always vested in Congress." He went on to say that their voting as States, even in the Confederation, was no evidence of sovereignty. A sovereign power which cannot declare war or make peace with other sovereign powers, or coin money or conclude treaties, or which, having delegated those powers at its sovereign will, cannot at that will resume them, is a very absurd sovereign power. If Lincoln resume them, Jefferson Davis and his confederates were correct in asserting that secession was the right of a sovereign State. When Mr Anthony held up Mr. Eaton on the points of this very simple dilemma, his wriggling was pitiful. He attempted to explain that the States were sovereign except when they were not sovereign, and the Senate very properly laughed, and Mr. Eaton said that he did not feel well. That was precisely what Davis and his men said after a like attempt to put Mr. Eaton's doctrines into practice.

What is the "reform Democracy." The party proceeds in electing a Senator from New England, and he begins by professing his allegiance to the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions and the dogmas by which secession and rebellion were defended. He succeeds in proving to the intelligent people of this country that the Democratic party is the same old party whose dangerous fallacies Webster exposed forty years ago and which still perpetuate only echoes of the opinions upon which it defended slavery and which logically justified nullification and rebellion. While it recoils to the Capitol from this part of the country Senators who, like Mr. Eaton, proclaim these principles, and leads from Missouri and Georgia Senators who, like Messrs. Cockrell and Gordon, maintained them in the field. Are such men more likely to administer the government according to the principles established by the war than those who sustained the war and won the victory?

Mr Eaton succeeds Governor Buckingham, who was one of the most devoted and patriotic of the war governors. Does any intelligent American not utterly blinded by partisan fury suppose that it would have been better for Connecticut and the country if Mr. Eaton had been Governor instead of Mr. Buckingham? Why should it be supposed that a Tory of the Revolution would have been a safer guardian of the Government founded upon the principles of liberty than a Son of Liberty? That is a question which the voters of Connecticut have to ask themselves now. For what reason should Mr. Eaton and Governor Gordon and Cockrell, enemies of the principles and objects of the war, hostile to the amendments and the settlements, asserting that the States are sovereign and independent," be preferred in the control of the Government to those who deny the sovereignty of the States, who hold to the national supremacy of the Union, and who believe that the amendments are just and should be enforced?

THE CHICAGO CONTEMPT CASE. The Chicago dailies, without exception, condemn the action of Judge Williams in sentencing Mr. Storey, editor of the Times, to ten days' imprisonment for contempt of court. Of the evening papers of Tuesday the Post and Mail spoke in terms of the severest censure of the matter and manner of the charge, which was delivered in the most objective style. The Journal said, editorially:

We unhesitatingly pronounce this proceeding a judicial outrage of the most flagrant character, and venture the prediction that it will not be long before the judge will have occasion to repent of his rashness.

The Inter-Ocean says:

We are opposed to the imprisonment of any person without process of law and we do not regard summary proceedings of committal to jail for contempt of any individual as due process of law, for the right, if it exists at all, goes to the extent of confinement for life. Judge Williams, in imprisoning Mr. Storey for ten days, asserted the right to confine the prisoner during the remainder of his life. The American people will not consent to hold personal liberty at the will of any judge of any court. They will not permit the doctrine of contempt, as illustrated in the Storey case, to become the law of the land.

ADJUT GENERAL SPINNER. General Francis E. Spinner, who has just resigned his position as Treasurer of the United States, wrote a private letter to Mr. Ellis H. Robert, in 1874, declining to profit by a suggestion of the Utica Herald that the public subscribe to a fund that should help him to competence, as he, by his long and honorable public service, had not accumulated anything beyond a very modest fortune. The letter has just been published for the first time, and the following is an extract from it: "I must from convictions of duty, and from what I believe to be right and proper, most respectfully decline the contemplated pecuniary aid as proposed. The conviction in my own mind that I have conscientiously done my duty, though not more, yet my whole duty, to my fellow countrymen, individually and collectively, and the knowledge, evidenced by proof, like your editorial testimony, is recompense enough to satisfy for all the cares, anxieties, privations, and sacrifices that have been voluntarily and cheerfully made, during the long years of our struggle for national existence, and ever since that time. I have but three children to provide for. Having always believed that $10,000 left to a child is as well as if not better than a much larger sum, I have, therefore, never desired to be be rich, or to leave to each of my heirs more than that amount of money. Unless again overtaken by misfortune, through the misconduct of others, I am now able to do that. This, with an honest reputation, will be a legacy that should satisfy my children; and the knowledge that my services are appreciated by such good and true men as you, whose good opinion I covet above all material goods, fully satisfies me."

THE ELLSWORTH ELECTION. The American says: "The result of this election on Monday was particularly gratifying to the Republicans of this city, because they succeeded in re-electing May as Grant by an increased majority over that of last year. In 1874 his majority was 69; this year, 77. A heavy vote (1017 ballots) was thrown, and the Democracy never brought more desperately. Our present mayor was solely selected as a candidate, and the vote was more nearly of that party vote than we have had for several years at a spring election."

THE TITLE OF CARDINAL. A correspondent of the London Times gives some interesting facts concerning the office and title of Cardinal, from which we learn some information which, in view of Archbishop McCloskey's promotion, will be of interest here. The word means in late Latin (principal) or "chief," and originally was used to designate every ecclesiastical functionary of the principal church in any town; the title was used to designate the highest ecclesiastical dignity in Rome next to that of the Papacy. In 1567 Pius IV., by a formal law, restricted the use of the title to the Roman Cardinals, from which time the Cardinal have been a body of prelates forming the permanent Senate of the Church. In 1586 Sixtus V. fixed the number of the "Sacred College of Cardinals" at 70, these being divided into three orders. The number is seldom complete, and, as is well known, the vacancies have been many during late years. The present number, including the Cardinals just made, is only 65. The Pope alone can create a Cardinal, and he usually keeps some nominations reserved in petto, announcing the promotion, but not publishing the names until afterward. When a Cardinal is formally promoted, he first receives from the Pope the red berretta, at the next consistory he receives the hat, and at the next a ring of sapphires set in gold. The red hat was first given to Cardinals by Innocent IV., elected in 1243, and its signification was that Cardinals ought to ever be ready to shed their blood in defence of the faith," and "for the liberty of the Christian people." In Catholic countries Cardinals come next to Kings. Ecclesiastically they have certain ceremonial additions; they are on terms of intimate affection with the Pope, and by the permission of Urban VIII., granted in 1630, are entitled to be addressed as "Most Eminent."

Between the Democratic party and the Republican party the people must choose. There is no third party. The government must be confided to the men who have proved themselves capables, or to the men who have shown administrative capacity and willingness to correct abuses and errors. On this question of administrative reform the Republican party has a better showing than its opponents.—Portland Press.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL

How much solid comfort do our "liberal" Democratic Republicans get out of the Senatorial vote of Louisiana? The congressmen don't pan out much.—Lowell Courier.

Messrs. John G. Whittier, Wendell Phillips, William Lloyd Garrison, George W. Curtis, and Frederick Douglass are expected to participate in the Centennial anniversary of the Pennsylvania Abolition Society on April 14.

The Rochester Express says "The secession avowals of Senators Norman and Eaton in their recent maiden senatorial speeches are attracting considerable attention throughout the country. The press has sounded the note of alarm."

It is noticed in Pennsylvania that the Democratic party all the country over declare against General Hancock for the Presidency because he is a soldier, but seats ninety Confederate soldiers in Congress at one election. It makes all the difference in the world with that party whether a man fights for or against his country.

Little Delaware, too, has been ugly enough to go into the nullification business. One of the bills passed at the recent session of the Legislature authorizes commutation counties, innkeepers, etc., to provide separate accommodations for "any class of persons obnoxious" to their other passengers or customers. Meaning, of course, "niggers." This is pretty small business, even for so small a State as Delaware.—Springfield Republican.

A Hartford correspondent of the New York Times concludes a letter on the Connecticut campaign thus: "Neither side is at heart satisfied as to how the contest is going to end, and there is an utter dearth of prophecy. As for betting, there is none at all. Everybody believes, however, that on the State ticket, almost the last vote will be required to determine the result. Beyond this, nobody appears to be sure of anything."

CONSUMPTIVES, TAKE NOTICE.

Every moment of delay makes your cure more hopeless, and much depends on your choice of a remedy. The antidote of testimony in favor of Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, as a cure for consumption, far exceeds all that can be brought to support the pretensions of any other medicine. See Dr. Schenck's Almanac, containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability, who have been restored to health, after being pronounced incurable by physicians of the highest standing. Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma and Liver Complaint, are generally cured by the use of Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills. Either the timely use of these medicines, according to directions, or the combined use of the three, is necessary in some cases of Consumption, to cure it.

Dr. Schenck will be at the Quincy House, Boston, on the following days, for consultation, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 P. M.: Jan 18th and 25th, Feb 8th and 22d, and March 8th and 24th. Consultation free, but for a thorough examination of the lungs, with the Respirometer, a fee of $5 is charged.

Opening of the Court Thursday—A Great Crowd

NEW YORK April 1 [illegible] this morning the Brooklyn Court-room was filled [illegible] Plymouth Church [illegible] Deacon Caldwell [illegible] respectable portion of the [illegible] arrived Mrs Field [illegible] Mrs Tilton or Bessie Turner were [illegible] Mr Beecher's sons and his sisters—Mrs [illegible] Beecher and Mrs Perkins—were in the court room since 10 o'clock. There were altogether nearly fifteen ladies in court by far the largest number since the trial commenced. At ten minutes to eleven [illegible] the Judge's arrival [illegible] the court to ascertain whether [illegible] forbidding standing room had been carried [illegible] the court was literally packed full—so [illegible] jurors who arrived so unusually early as [illegible] their way to their places

Pressing Through the Jam

Precisely at 11 o'clock Mr Beecher walked in by the front entrance after him walked Mrs Beecher, Theodore O [illegible] Bullard, his brother in law and then three lady friends. Mr Beecher's appearance denoted no trace of excitement his usual every day demeanor being apparent, and with a rosy face and smiles and words to his acquaintances he slowly made his way through the seated crowd. A buzz of conversation instantly arose and lasted until the first witness was called to the witness chair. Immediately behind Beecher and his friends came Tilton and his counsel Beach. In the crush Beecher and Beach were brought face to face and they bowed and shook hands. The jury answered to their names at twelve minutes after eleven

Redpath Recalled

Mr Fullerton then addressing the court, said he wished to recall James Redpath, and that witness accordingly resumed the chair. Among the prominent gentlemen present were Judge Reynolds, Rev C F Everett of the church of Puritans, Rev Geo W Woodruff, D D Secretary of the last Methodist Conference (he is a guest of Supervisor French who was also present) Thomas O Acton, formerly Police Commissioner of New York, Rev Dr Woodruff, Rev Dr Cuyler, Chas Gaylor, the playwright, Prof Rosalter, W. Raymond and Henry W Sage.

Interviews with Beecher, Tilton and Moulton.

He was shown letters and asked if he had an interview with Mr Beecher before it was written, he replied "I did, on the evening before. This was in July 1874, I saw him at Peekskill on a Monday. I told Mr. Beecher I had spent Sunday with Theodore, Elizabeth and Frank, and went to see Theodore in the morning. I described the interview to him, told Mr Beecher that Theodore was going to charge him with having committed adultery with Elizabeth, extending through two or three years. Tilton told me he was glad to see me and asked me how he should fight this battle. In the afternoon of Sunday Moulton came to Tilton's, and told Beecher, and said to Theodore, Redpath is going up to see Beecher to-morrow. Moulton asked what I was going for, and I said I was going to arrange dates, and Tilton said tell Beecher that I am going to charge him with adultery. Moulton walked up and down the room and spoke of his love for both Tilton and Beecher [illegible] refused at the time, but did tell Beecher [illegible] After I told this to Beecher he said he supposed, I know all that Theodore had to say on the subject. I replied that I did [illegible]

Beecher did not deny he had given [illegible] a card [illegible] a just verdict [illegible] He said he [illegible] dependent on the good will [illegible] Tilton, that he was a scoundrel, and that when the scandal had become quiet, he had endeavored to [illegible] Mr Beecher [illegible] sympathetic letters he had received from all parts of the country. Beecher [illegible] Mr Evarts objected and was supported by Mr Porter [illegible] the jury to [illegible]

The question was allowed and the [illegible] I did not ask him about it.

To Mr Shearman—I went up to see Mr Beecher at Peekskill with reference to a lecture contract in the fall.

Administering the Oath to Mr Beecher

[illegible] Mr Evarts [illegible] Beecher [illegible] the usual form Mr Beecher [illegible] uplifted hand instead of [illegible] the Bible [illegible] on the Bible [illegible] God [illegible] New England fashion.

Opening of His Testimony

[illegible] born in Litchfield Conn in 1813 my father Rev Lyman Beecher died in 1863 aged [illegible] years [illegible] when I was thirteen years old and went to Boston [illegible] settled in [illegible] 183[illegible] I was in [illegible] under the care of the American Home Missionary Society [illegible] I came to be pastor of Plymouth church [illegible] the property, I told them [illegible]

Trip to Europe—Connection with the Independent

The winter [illegible] I was abroad twice, first in consequence of my first sickness [illegible] I went to Europe [illegible] to take preparatory to greater labors [illegible] Manchester [illegible] England [illegible] about the affairs in America [illegible] church is now [illegible] over 2,000 [illegible] I have continued [illegible] Friday evening [illegible] the parlor of the church [illegible] young people. I have been connected with the New York Independent [illegible] In 1861 I became connected with the Independent [illegible] After the [illegible] dropped [illegible] with the Independent

Connection with the Christian Union

The Christian Union was originally the Church [illegible] friend of mine and circumstances [illegible] about 1000 bona fide [illegible] The Christian Union had [illegible] over 30,000 circulation [illegible] Mr Evarts said [illegible] lost on it as ever Mr Beecher)

When [illegible] your question (Laughter)

The examination continued. My vacation extended from the first of August to the [illegible] of September [illegible] summer residence in Peekskill about 11 years and [illegible] spend my vacation there, but in the last 11 years have gone to the White Mountains. I have been set free [illegible] in 185[illegible] to go and lecture on politics [illegible] There are about 33 volumes in my name now. The life of Christ was undertaken in December 1867 and the first volume was issued in September 1871. The preparation of the work occupied much of my time. My Norwood appeared in the Ledger in 18[illegible] book form in 1868 [illegible] aged 7 year

Mr Beecher's Home Circle

I was [illegible] married [illegible] my wife [illegible] I was engaged when 18 or 19 [illegible] I have four children living, and four waiting for me. I have eight grand-children. Of late years my wife has had occasion to visit the South since 1870 or 1871. While I was in Europe [illegible] my wife went to her home in Massachusetts [illegible] that was the only break in our living together. From an early period I delegated to her my secular affairs so that until two years ago I never even drew my own salary. She had poor health but strength of purpose that gave her the strength of ten women and this lasted until an accident happened to her. She has opened my letters for many years

Visiting Parishioners — Political Acquaintance

In my earlier years I attempted a great deal of visiting, subsequently to that I found it impossible to receive multitudinous calls in general, of late I do not visit frequently. I was cautioned against having intimacy with the families of my parishioners but I stood up for my rights, no matter who might be jealous. There were intimacies of my family with other families in my parish — I have had large personal acquaintance with men engaged in politics and correspondence. Within the twenty years past leaving out vacations from 1864 to 1873, I averaged six addresses a week, including two sermons on Sunday

Acquaintance and Relations with Bowen.

I became acquainted with Bowen in 1847. He was a leading man in the church and connected with the Independent and leading men of the church. He was one of the proprietors from the outset and became the sole proprietor. I was a guest at his house the second week I came here and we worked hand in hand in building up the church, and he more than any other man was useful. I saw him almost every day and was intimate with him but his family were not so much intimate with mine. In 1866, when I wrote the Cleveland letter, the Independent criticised me so severely, at a time when all were against me, saves the Democratic party, and I felt this so much, that I gave notice of the termination of my contract with it and I dissolved the contract. From that time to December, 1870, my personal relations with him were diminished and there was considerable coolness. He was a pew-holder of my church, a prominent one

Early Acquaintance with Tilton.

I recollect while Tilton was an employe on the New York Observer [illegible] reporter. I became acquainted with him as a member of the church, presenting him to report my sermons with a view of publishing them in a volume. I can't say what his age was, but he was extremely youthful and [illegible] sympathies from that fact [illegible] a great deal for a year or two before 1860, when he was on the Independent, and after that I saw him several times a week. Our relations were very cordial on both sides. He was witty and amusing in conversation and I chatted with him, though not coming into close personal relations but thereafter we were together almost every day. It was companionship [illegible] (Laughter)

The Agreement with Bowen about Tilton's Becoming Editor of the Independent.

In 1863 I began to prepare the position of editor for him to succeed me. It was a condition [illegible] by me when I took the editorship that he should be associate editor. I made the agreement with Bowen that I was to go to Europe and allow my name to stand for a year [illegible] on the Independent [illegible] carrying it on his own name. This was in 1863

A Growing Rivalry

[illegible] Board of Foreign Missions [illegible] with slavery

He continued. About this time I often heard of growing rivalry on the part of Tilton [illegible] Tilton [illegible] I could not fix the time [illegible] stood out above all others [illegible] and so feel it, and have so expressed myself to him

Change in Tilton's Religious Views

[illegible] departure from traditional belief to [illegible] personal belief [illegible]

Tilton's Protestations of Friendship

[illegible] In 1867 when the [illegible] established [illegible] Tilton [illegible] had while in a restaurant made some statement [illegible] and see [illegible] to see what [illegible] your feelings [illegible] Evarts read the letter [illegible] Tilton says [illegible] love [illegible]

Tilton's Connection with the Church

Mr Beecher next referred to co-operation with Tilton [illegible] church [illegible] He was for a while [illegible] of the Sunday School and used to take part [illegible] taken up [illegible]

Acquaintance with Moulton

[illegible] my portrait to the artist [illegible] had already painted an excellent likeness [illegible] Mr Moulton [illegible] Moulton [illegible] with him

First Acquaintance with Mrs Tilton

I knew Miss Richards (afterward Mrs Tilton) as one of a set of young girls going to [illegible] daughter [illegible] Tilton [illegible] member of my congregation [illegible] them coming to my house as [illegible] as ever you saw. I was only once or twice [illegible] when they removed to Mrs Morse's

Tilton Presses Beecher to Visit His House

I think it was early in 1866 when [illegible] began to be a good deal together [illegible] Tilton began to desire my visits to his house. He spoke [illegible] of his wife. [illegible] You don't know [illegible] There is one little woman [illegible] a better friend than I [illegible]

The Presents Given Mrs Tilton

I had brought [illegible] from Europe [illegible] brooch to Mrs Tilton. I visited them a good deal at Mrs Morse's while they were at his house. I presented a picture to her [illegible] early chapters of Norwood. I was in despair, and [illegible] one not critical to praise it [illegible] to Mrs Tilton [illegible] was good enough to be on the [illegible] about it. One chapter in particular she was delighted with and on seeing the picture which reminded me of the scene she praised it and I bought it for her. The pictures I made in Europe were distributed among my children and friends

Calls at Tilton's

While Tilton's family were on Livingston street the post-office [illegible] and my habit was to go down for my letters and drop in to see them for half an hour and whatever calls I made were nearly all at that hour. I did not call at Livingston street or anywhere in the evening unless they had company. The calls I made in my neighborhood were usually at 5 o'clock, when I called at Tilton's [illegible] was sometimes there and sometimes he was not. I remember taking Mrs Tilton out to drive in 1870. I don't know how it arose but I had bought a pair of horses at that time. Next day Mrs Morse met me in a buggy and begged me to take Elizabeth out a second time, as I had no idea how much good a drive did her. I called for a second drive and told Tilton. Mrs Tilton declined to go, but her mother urged her, and she went. In August, 1870 I received a note from Mrs Tilton and another request went to see her, I went up to the second floor, saw her looking very despondent, I don't recollect any particular conversation, but she told she was very depressed and she seemed to me like one that wanted to talk and could not. I cheered her and prayed with her, next day I called and sent up my card, but did no see her, she sent down a little note, saying that she hoped all would be well in the future. I returned to the city in October after having the hay fever, and the impression of sickness remained till November came. In the following month of that year I saw Mrs Tilton. The first intimation that Mrs Tilton desired a separation from her husband was from what Bessie Turner told me. (Details of the conversation excluded.) In consequence of what Bessie Turner told me, I went to Mrs Morse's and saw Mrs Tilton.

Question—What occurred on that occasion?

The Advice about Separation.

Mr Beach objected to this question and a long argument on its [illegible] followed and Judge Neilson finally decided that the defence could prove what occurred leaving out the conversation, and Beach withdrew his objection and witness continued: The conversation was almost entirely on the part of Mrs. Tilton and Mrs. Morse as to the general unhappiness of the family and his treatment of them until Mrs Tilton had made up her mind to leave him and sent for me to ask as to the propriety of the step. I said this was a case in which a man could not give the best advice and referred them to my wife, Mrs Morse said "I will bless her if she comes."

Mr and Mrs. Beecher's Visit to Mrs Tilton.

Mr Beach—It is right to say I also withdraw my objection against the conversation with Bessie Turner and I now allow it to be given in evidence

Witness—I called next day my wife with me. Mrs. Tilton went up stairs with my wife and they had an interview by themselves, after half an hour Mrs Tilton came down and Mrs Morse went up to see Mrs Beecher. The only remark I remember of making to Mrs Tilton was "How is it that I have known you so long and never heard a complaint about domestic difficulties?" She said in reply "that she was hoping the difficulty would pass away." After some conversation about household matters with Mrs Tilton Mr Beecher came down and we went home. My wife had, I considered next day and we pretty substantially agreed

The Note to Mrs Tilton

The next day my wife went down to Mrs Tilton's again while I was at home [illegible] as I could not speak to her I wrote this [illegible] (note produced) as [illegible] what I thought about the subject, I was detained by company but I would not have gone with my wife if there had been no company that note expresses the conclusion that I came to [illegible] as to what was best to be done. The note was read "I am inclined to think [illegible] right [illegible] and little [illegible] for support could be best [illegible]

MARGARET JOHNSON

Lives in Milford, knows Mrs. Dougherty, she lives not far from her, saw her the next day after Brawn's death at her own house. Had conversation with Mrs. Dougherty as to the manner in which Brawn lost his life, she was crying and witness asked her why she was crying, and she said she was sorry to be in that nasty boat, and was afraid of her life night and day there. She hoped and trusted that the Lord would send her a pension. I will go to Oldtown, says she, and I told her to tell the truth about it and she says, they were scolding and fighting about money. She asked Mr. Brawn to put the boat ashore so she could get out. Mr. Brawn did and she and Mrs. Carson walked along and presently she heard a cry and looked round and saw Mr Carson strike Brawn with an axe. Says I, Mrs. Dougherty, is it true that Carson killed Mr. Brawn? Says she, Yes [illegible] and Mrs. Johnson, I know [illegible] your hands and [illegible] tell any body [illegible] Carson [illegible] which will be very soon. [illegible] sat down on a rock and asked Mrs Carson what her man was doing killing Brawn? and Mrs Carson held up a long knife and said if she said any more of that she would have her life or knock our her brains"

The Court here adjourned till half past two.

Afternoon

The Court reassembled at half-past two and the examination of Mrs Johnson was continued.

Cross-examined Has known Mrs Dougherty four years [Here the witness broke out into an indignant refusal to communicate to Mr. Knowles any more than she had already said and was nearly as good as her word] Never told this before to anybody till she told it to Mr Lancaster. THE CITY OF OUR GOD

BY REBECCA R. PIERCE.

O great and mighty City of our God
Glorious the beauties that within thee dwell
Angels and men might join with one accord
To tell thy wondrous loveliness to all

Far far beyond the grasp of human thought
The glories be thy jasper walls e fold —
Nor angels tongues may tell what hath been wrought
For those who se feet shall tread thy streets of gold!

No gloom pervades thy habitations fair
No mildew blight of care nor grief nor sin
No sad farewell nor parting tears are there —
[illegible] the Death-angel never enters in

[illegible] thy brightness [illegible] doth the night
There [illegible] nor moon nor stars are [illegible]
[illegible] the Redeemer is Himself the light,
[illegible] glorifieth all where all is fair

No mortal eye hath seen [illegible] mortal ear
[illegible] knowledge gained of joys which there [illegible]
[illegible] conceived the brightness of the [illegible] here
[illegible] the spirit yearns unsatisfied

[illegible] cometh of in happy dreams
[illegible] hint of the bright joys which [illegible]
[illegible] the far-off gleams
[illegible] beyond the silent sea!

[illegible] methinks in gentle whisper [illegible]
A [illegible] from that mystic shore I hear
[illegible] undefined that [illegible]
To me an earnest of that [illegible]

[illegible] where lost [illegible] waiting [illegible]
[illegible] of the weary spirit, where?
[illegible] finger to the [illegible] sky
[illegible]

[illegible] where pleasures never [illegible]
[illegible] eyes and yearning heart I wait;
[illegible] valley where the shadows lie
[illegible] of the [illegible] gate

[illegible] those transcendent joys [illegible]
[illegible] free from every stain of sin?
[illegible] that the gates [illegible]
[illegible] those who [illegible]

[illegible] thy beauty [illegible]
[illegible] would [illegible]
[illegible] heavenly courts of endless light!

Orrington March 1.

CHARLES VAN RHEYN

BY JOHNNY LUDLOW

[Concluded.]

Getting Tod apart that night I put the matter to him [illegible] Charley Van Rheyn [illegible] whether he thought [illegible] great deal of [illegible] Van Rheyn got treated to [illegible] superlative [illegible] to a man [illegible]

[illegible] Dr Frost [illegible] Saturday afternoon [illegible] Doctor [illegible] general [illegible]

[illegible]

All right.

It was on Saturday afternoon and [illegible] for Hare and Hounds [illegible] Van Rheyn [illegible]

[illegible]

What is just the [illegible] for Tod had gone away.

You see the scent [illegible] strips of old copy books [illegible] pockets with [illegible] of the scent [illegible]

And then [illegible] Van Rheyn. Then [illegible] is over. [illegible]

The hare [illegible] that all [illegible] to do is to [illegible] upon us continually and lead us hours again after him. We vault over the obstructions—gates and stiles hedges and [illegible] Or if the hedges are too high scramble through them.

But the hedges are very thick and close nobody could get through them [illegible] taking the word [illegible] too literally.

Then we are to dish [illegible] I have to [illegible] somehow [illegible] onward.

I can [illegible] you say quite easily.

All right, Charley. I repeated as Tod had done. And neither of us had the smallest thought that it was not all right.

Millichip was chosen hare. Snepp turned cranky over something or other at the last moment and backed out of it. He made the best hare in the school, but Millichip was nearly as fleet a runner.

What with making the scent, and having it out with Snepp time was hindered, and it was getting on to four o clock when we started. Which docked the run considerably for we had to be in at six to tea. Letting the hare get on well ahead, the signal was given, and we started after him in full cry, rending the air with shouts and rushing along like the wind.

A right-down good hare Millichip turned out to be, doubling and twisting and finessing and exasperating the hounds considerably. About five o clock he had made tracks for home as we found by the scent, but we could neither see him nor catch him. Later, I chanced to come to grief in a treacherous ditch, lost my straw hat, and tore the sleeve of my jacket. This threw me behind the rest, and when I pelted up to the next stile there stood Van Rheyn. He had halted to rest his arms on it, his breath was coming in alarming gasps, his face whiter than any sheet.

"Hollon, Van Rheyn! What's up? The pace is too much for you."

"It was my breath," said he, when the gasps allowed him to answer. "I go on now."

I put my arm on him. "Look here, the run's nearly over, we shall soon be at home. Don't go on so fast."

"But I want to be in at what they call the death."

"There'll be no death to-day; the hare's safe to win."

"I want to keep up," he answered, getting over the stile. "I said I could keep up and do what the rest did." And off he was again full rush.

Before us on that side of the stile was a tolerably wide field. The pack had wound half over it during this short halt, making straight for the clearance to the coppice at the other end. We were doing our best to reach them up when I distinctly saw a heavy stone flung into their midst. Looking at the direction it came from there crept a dirty ragamuffin over the ground on his hands and knees. He did not see me [illegible] behind, and he flung another heavy stone. Had it struck any one's head it would have done damage.

Letting the chase go, I stole across and pounced upon him before he could get away. He twisted himself out of my hands like an eel and stood grinning, devil [illegible] whistling to his dog. We knew the young [illegible] camp well [illegible] whether [illegible] was a whole [illegible] At any rate he was [illegible] was the pest of the neighborhood and had enjoyed some short sojourns in prison for trespass. Raddy was the name he [illegible] by; we knew him by no other, and how he got [illegible] nobody could tell.

"What did you throw those stones for? [illegible] Didn't throw [illegible] at you."

"You had better mind what you are about, Mr. Raddy, unless you want to get into trouble."

"Yah—you get [illegible] Raddy."

[illegible]

[illegible] Van Rheyn [illegible]

"Oh—but Charley [illegible] you are going to die."

[illegible]

[illegible] Dr. Frost [illegible] Mr. Featherston [illegible]

[illegible]

"Here's Raddy Van Rheyn. [illegible]"

[illegible]

"Raddy," I said speaking [illegible] to Dr Frost [illegible]

[illegible]

"Give it first."

Just for a moment I hesitated in my extremity of [illegible] but I knew it would be only throwing [illegible] away. Paid before [illegible] Raddy would no more do the errand than he'd fly. I told him so, and he [illegible] round of swearing.

"Could I [illegible] if I [illegible] to persuade him? If Charles Van Rheyn [illegible] for lack of help.

"Did you ever have anybody to care for, Raddy? Did you ever have a mother?"

Her's sent [illegible] he [illegible] be glad o't. Her beated of me, her did. I wasn't a going to stand that.

"If you ever had anybody you cared for the least bit in the world, Raddy, if you ever [illegible] anybody a good turn in all your life, you will help this poor fellow now. Come and look at him! See whether I dare leave him."

"None o' yer swindles! Ye wants to get me in there yo does. Yah! I wan't borned yesterday."

Well, it seemed hopeless. "Will you go for the sixpence if I give it you beforehand, Raddy?"

"Give it over an I see. Where the thunder have yo been?" dealing his dog a savage kick, as it came up barking. "Be I to whistle yo all day d'ye think?" Another kick.

I had found two sixpences in my pocket, all its store. Bringing forth one, I held it out to him.

"Now listen, Raddy. I give you this sixpence now. You are to run with all your might to the house—and you can run you know, like the wind. Say that I sent you—you know my name, Johnny Ludlow—sent you to tell them that the French boy is in the coppice dying"—for I thought it best to put it strong—"Dr. Frost or some of them must send off for Mr. Featherstone. You can remember that? The French boy, mind."

"I could remember it, if I tried."

"Well, I'll give you the sixpence. And, look here—here's another sixpence. It's all the money I have. That shall be yours also, when you have done the errand."

I slipped one of the sixpences back in my pocket, holding out the other. "But I have often wondered since that he didn't stun me with a blow, and take the two. Perhaps he could not entirely divest himself of that idea of the 'ambush.' I did not like the look on his false face as he slid cautiously up toward the sixpence.

"Take a look at him, you can see him from the stile," I said, closing my hand over the sixpence while I spoke, "convince yourself that he is there, and no trickery is meant. And Raddy," I added slowly opening the hand again, "perhaps you may want help one of these days yourself in some desperate need. Do this good turn for him and the like will then be done for you."

I tossed him the sixpence. He stole cautiously to the stile, making a wide circuit round me to do it, glanced at Van Rheyn and then made straight off in the right direction as fast as his legs would carry him, the dog barking at his heels.

Van Rheyn was better when I got back to him, his breathing easier, the mouth less blue, and his arms were no longer up clutching the tree-trunk. Nevertheless there was that in his face that gave me an awful fear, and made my breath for a moment nearly as short as his. I sat down beside him letting him lean against me as well as the tree for better support.

"Are you afraid, Charley? I hope they'll not be long."

"I am not afraid with this," he answered, with a happy smile, and opening his hand [illegible] little cross clasped in it.

Well, that nearly did for me. It was as though he meant to imply he knew he was dying, and was not afraid to die. And he did it.

"You not comprehend," he added, [illegible] taking the look of my face—which no [illegible] was desperate. "I have kept the Savior with me here. I think [illegible]"

"Oh—but Charley, you don't think you are going to die?"

[illegible] said last Sunday I might [illegible] after [illegible] drew me close to her [illegible] falling on me. [illegible]

"Oh Charley [illegible]"

The idea of Term Life Natural Premiums is not applied by the other companies, because as they say they would not, on their "average" plan of taking all insured persons at the same premiums get enough to cover the expense of their numerous losses.

Hence, all other companies make faces at the American Popular, and call names about which it does not care a fig if it can only as it does, secure the approbation of the scientific and thoughtful, and the patronage of the probably long lived

District Court of the United States District of Maine

In the matter of SIMEON F SMITH [illegible] IN BANKRUPTCY

This is to give notice that a petition has been presented to the Court, this first day of January 1875 by Simeon F Smith of Hampden a bankrupt, praying that he may be decreed to have a full discharge from all his debts provable under the Bankrupt Act, and upon reading [illegible] petition [illegible] 20th day of February 1875,

It is ordered by the Court that a hearing be had upon the same, on the first Monday of May A D 1875, before the Court in Portland in said District at 10 o'clock A M, and that the second meeting of the creditors of said Bankrupt be held before Charles Hamlin, Esq. Register, on the fifth day of April, 1875, and the third meeting of the same on the fifth day of April 1875, and that notice thereof be published in the Bangor Daily Whig and Courier and the Piscataquis Observer newspapers printed in said District, once a week for three successive weeks, and once in the weekly Bangor Courier the last publication to be thirty days at least before the day of hearing, and that all creditors who have proved their debts and other persons in interest, may appear at said time and place, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

WM. P. PREBLE, Clerk of District Court for said District.
